EXPLANATION.

THE two first columns contain the days of the month and week; the third the Kalendar; the fourth and fifth the Sun's rising and setting, or the time when his center appears in the horizon, the effect of refraction being taken into the computation; the sixth the Equation of time; the seventh the Moon's age; the eighth the Moon's rising or setting. In the months of April, May, June, July, and August, the Sun's declination is substituted in place of the Moon's rising and setting, the latter being of little use during the summer season. The ninth column is the Moon's southing or passage over the meridian; the tenth and eleventh the morning and evening tides at Leith.

In England all grain is bought and sold by the quarter; in Scotland by the boll. The Scots boll varies in its measure according to the different kinds of grain. The following is the difference between the English quarter and Scots boll.

The English bushel of wheat and peas is 3 pecks and 92 hundredth parts of a peck Scots measure. Ditto of barley and oats is 2 pecks and 69 parts of a peck.—The English quarter of wheat and peas is 1 boll 3 firlots 3 pecks, and 41 parts of a peck, Scots measure. Ditto of barley and oats is 1 boll 1 firlot 1 peck, and 53 parts of a peck.

Nota. 4 bushels make 1 comb, 2 combs 1 quarter, and 4 quarters 1 chalder English; and 4 hieppies make 1 peck, 4 pecks 1 firlot, 4 firlots 1 boll, and 16 bolls 1 chalder, Scots measure.

In this month sow cresses, mustard, rape, raddish, turnip, and other sorts of small sallad herbs, upon moderate hot beds. Look carefully to your colliflower plants which are under frames, pulling off all decayed leaves from them, and give them as much air as possible when the weather will permit. Towards the end of this month, you may transplant carrots, parsnips, leeks, and cabbages for seed, hanging the cabbages up three days before planting.

In this month prepare your ground for carrots, parsnips, raddishes, spinage, beets, beans, peas, parley, and cabbage lettuce, which should now be sown. Plant garlick, shallots, rochambole, and cives; as also onions which have sprouted in winter to draw up for scallions in April, when the dry onions will be almost gone, and the Michaelmas onions will be too small for many kitchen uses. Make moderate hot-beds for sowing some colliflower seeds for summer plants. Plant Hops, dig the ground and prune the roots of the old Hop grounds, being careful not to injure the buds of the plants which now begin to swell.

In this month sow the seeds of cabbages, favoys, and red cabbages, for next winter's use, on a bed of light earth in the open air, and plant out all your colliflower plants which are remaining in the winter-beds into the quarters of the kitchen garden for the general crop. Continue to put in beans and peas every fortnight or three weeks, that there may be a succession of them through the season. Sow radishes, spinage, and young fallad herbs every week.

In this month, towards the latter end, sow several sorts of seeds, which remain a long time in the ground, which, if sown in the spring, will often miscarry, as chervil, angelica, lovage, masterwort, scurvy-grass, fennel, Alexanders, sweet fescell, corn-sallad, and some others, which always succeed better when sown at this season, than when they are sown in the spring. Cut off the flowering branches of most sorts of aromatic plants which are past flowering.

In this month hoe and clean turnips, and the spinage which was sown the last month, from weeds, cutting out the plants where they are too close, observing, if possible, to do this in dry weather, otherwise the weeds will take root again, and be very troublesome. Weed the beds of onions, carrots, colliflower, cabbage plants, and coleworts, which were sown the last month; for if the weeds are permitted to grow, they will soon over-top the plants and spoil them.

In this month transplant brown Dutch and common cabbage lettuces, upon warm borders, near walls, pales, or hedges, to abide the winter; as you may also some Cos, Cilicia, and imperial lettuces; but it will be proper to plant some of all these sorts upon beds, to be covered with frames or mats in winter, because, if the frost should be very severe, it will destroy the Cos and Cilicia lettuces.

In this month sow all sorts of fallad-herbs upon moderate hot-beds; as lettuce, cressles, mustard, rape, raddish, turnip, that the table may be constantly furnished with them; and in dry weather take up your endive. Clear the ipinnage, onions, and other crops which were sown in July and August, from weeds. Pick all decayed leaves from off the colliflower plants. Make hot-beds for asparagus; take up the roots of carrots, parsnips, potatoes, beets, falfasy, scorzonera, and large-rooted parsley.

In this month sow cresses, mustard, rape, raddish, turnip, and other sallad-herbs, upon a moderate hot-bed, which should be either covered with frames, or arched over with hoops, and covered with mats; for at this season these seeds will not come up, where they are exposed to the open air. Earth up celery to blanch it. Cover endive with fern, straw, or peas-haulm. Pick snails out of the holes of old walls, or from under pales and hedges.

† There are nine great officers of the Crown who by their posts take place next to the Princes of the blood, and the two Primates:

1. The Lord High Steward of England, whose office is so great as now to be held only occasionally, viz. at a coronation, or to sit judge on a Peer or Peeres, when tried for a capital crime. In coronations it is held for that day only by some high nobleman—in trials it is generally exercised by the Lord Chancellor or Lord Privy Seal, whose commission as high steward ends with the trial by breaking his white rod, the badge of his office.

2. The Lord High Chancellor, who presides in the Court of Chancery to moderate the severities of the Law in all cases where the property of the subject is concerned, and he proceeds according to the dictates of reason and equity.

3. The Lord High Treasurer. This post has of late been veiled in a commission consisting of five persons, called Lords of the Treasury, but the first Commissioner is still supposed to possess the power of Lord High Treasurer, and has the management and charge of all the revenues of the Crown kept in the Exchequer; also the letting of all the leases of Crown lands, and the gift of all places belonging to the customs in the different parts of the kingdom. Having the disposal of so great a number of lucrative places, born in Britain and America, as well as the public finances in his hands, the importance of this office may easily be understood.

4. The Lord President of the Council was formerly an officer of great power: his duty is to propose all the business transacted at the Council Board, and to report to the King, when his Majesty is not present, all the debates and proceedings. This is an office of great dignity as well as difficulty.

5. The Lord Privy Seal, whose office it is to put the Kings Seal to all charters, grants, and the like, that are signed by the King, in order to their passing the Great Seal. He has also under his cognizance many other affairs that do not require the Great Seal, and is to take care that the Crown be not imposed upon in any transaction passing thro' his hands, and is responsible if he should apply the Privy Seal to any thing against the law of the land.

6. The Lord Great Chamberlain of England. This office is hereditary in the Duke of Ancaster's family.—He attends the King's person on his coronation to dress him, and has likewise charge of the house of Lords during the sitting of parliament; also of fitting up Westminster-hall for coronations, or trial of peers.

7. The Lord High Constable. This office has been disused ever since the year 1521, but is revived occasionally for a coronation. It was formerly a place of very high trust, as the High Constable then commanded all the Kings forts and garrisons, and took place of all other officers in the field.

8. The Earl Marshall of England; which office is hereditary in the Duke of Norfolk's family, but as his Grace is disqualified by his religion from the exercise of many parts of his office, some nobleman, generally one of his Grace's friends or family is deputed to act for him, and he wears as his badge a gold baton tipped with ebony.—This office formerly required great abilities, learning, and knowledge of the English history, for its discharge. In time of war he was judge of army causes, and decided according to the principles of the civil law. If the cause did not admit of such a decision, it was left to a personal combat, the entire arrangement of which fell within the Marshall's province. Still either he or his deputies regulate all points of precedence, according to the archives kept in the Herald's office, which is altogether within his jurisdiction.

9. The Lord High Admiral of England; which office is now likewise held by commission, and is equal in its importance to any of the preceding, more especially since the vast growth of the British naval power. The Board of Admiralty regulates the whole naval force of the realm, names all its officers, or confirms them when named. All trials upon life and death in maritime affairs are held under a commission immediately issuing from this Board: and the members even sign the death warrants for execution, so that their jurisdiction is evidently very extensive: But as they are removable at pleasure, it may easily be conceived, that they can do nothing which can clash with the prerogative of the Crown.

This is a Court of equity, is next in dignity to the High Court of Parliament, and is designed to relieve the subject against frauds, breaches of trust, and other oppressions, and to mitigate the rigour of the law. The Lord High Chancellor sits as sole judge, and in his absence the Master of the Rolls. The form of proceeding in this Court is by bills, answers, and decrees; the witnesses are examined in private. This Court is always open; but if a person is sent to prison the Lord Chancellor can in any vacation, if he sees reason for it, grant a habeas corpus.

COURT of KING'S BENCH.

Judges, 2000 l. each.

Sir Rich. Aston, Edward Willies, Sir W. H. Ashurst.
Ed. Thurloe, Attor. genera.—A. Wedderburn, Soll. general.

Court of King's Bench—is so called from the kings of England sometimes sitting there in person, or because all matters determinable by common law between the King and his subjects are here tried, excepting such affairs as belong properly to the Exchequer. This Court is likewise a chancery upon all the inferior courts, their Judges, and Justices of the Peace. Here four judges preside, the first of whom is styled Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, or, by way of eminence, Lord Chief Justice of England, to express the great extent of his jurisdiction; for this Court can grant prohibitions in any cause depending either in spiritual or temporal courts. The other three judges are styled Justices or Judges of the King's Bench.

COURT of COMMON PLEAS.

Judges, 2000 l. each.

Sir Hen. Gould, Sir Will. Blackstone, Sir. Geo. Nares.
John Browning, Custos brevium, 600 l.

This Court takes cognizance of all pleas debateable between subject and subject; and in it, besides all real actions, fines and recoveries are transacted, and prohibitions are also issued out of it as well as from the King's Bench. The first Judge of this Court is styled Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas; beside him are three other Judges or Justices. None but Serjeants at Law are allowed to plead here.

COURT of EXCHEQUER.

L. North, Chancellor.—Sir Jos. Skynner, Lord Ch. Baron, 2000 l.

Barons, 2000 l. each.

Sir J. Eyre, Sir Beaum. Hotham, Sir Rich. Perryn.
Lionel Felton Hervey, King's Remembrancer.
Sir J. Shelley, Clark of the Pipe.—Hon. H. Walpole, Comptrol.

This Court was instituted for managing the revenues of the Crown, and has the power of judging both according to law and equity. In the proceedings according to law, the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and three other barons, preside as judges. They are styled Barons, because formerly none but barons of the realm were allowed to be judges in this Court. When this Court proceeds according to equity, the Lord Treasurer and the Chancellor of the Exchequer preside, assisted by the other barons. All matters touching the King's Treasury, revenues, customs, and fines, are tried and determined here.

The Lord Lyon judges in all complaints against Messengers at Arms, for malversation in office, and has power to fine, suspend, or deprive them, according to the degree of their demerit; and all these officers are appointed by him. The Lyon has likewise the sole power of giving and distinguishing arms, or coats armorial; and he, and his brethren the Heralds, have jurisdiction in all questions concerning arms. They have power (by act of Parliament, Chap. 21. Sec. 3. Parl. 2. Charles II.) to visit the arms of the nobility and gentry, and to prohibit persons who have no title to bear them, or whose arms are not matriculated in the Lyon records, from bearing the same.

under the penalty of forfeiting to the King every thing upon which such arms shall be engraven or represented, with 100 l. Scots to the Lyon and his brethren, or of being imprisoned during his pleasure. And all Magistrates, if required, are obliged to assist him in the execution of his office, under the pain of rebellion.

HERIOT'S HOSPITAL.

The Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Ordinary Council of the City, and the Rev. Ministers of Edinburgh, Governors.

Mr John Carmichael, Treasurer. Mr Hugh Buchan, Clerk.

It is to be observed, that the executors, &c. of Mr Heriot, after assigning his two estates in England, with the payments made by them, for great legacies to his relations, did not settle with the governors for the hospital account until anno 1627, when the whole amount of effects and cash received appears to be £. 23,625 : 10 : 3, therefore, Mr Maitland, and some late political writers, in their account of this hospital, are greatly mistaken, by stating the funds of the hospital stock in anno 1624 at £. 43,608 : 11 : 3 Sterling.

This hospital maintains at present 168 boys.

The tides are higher than ordinary twice every month, that is about the new and full moon, and are called spring tides; for at these times the actions of both the sun and moon are united, and draw in the same straight line, and consequently the sea must be more elevated. They are also less than ordinary twice every month, about the first and last quarters of the moon, and are called neap tides; for in the quarters the sun raises the waters where the moon depresses them, and depresses where the moon raises them.

Direct. Find the sum you want to know the interest of in the 1st column, and opposite to it, at the right hand, you have the interest for the day, week, month, and year, in the respective columns, as marked at the top. If you cannot find the exact sum at once, in the first column, then take it at twice, or oftner; for instance, if you want to know the interest of 1550, first take 1000, then 500, and then 50, add the interest opposite each together, and you will have the interest of 1550, and so on with any other sum.

Directions for the Purchase, Management, and Cure of HORSES.

In the purchase of a Horse, you should trust chiefly to your own judgment; for the gentry who in general make a livelihood by dealing in these noble and useful animals, are very little to be relied on.—Any thing above 14 hands high, and under 15 and a half, is esteemed a good size for a road Horse.

When the motions of a Horse please you, and you have an inclination to buy him, take him out some miles in uneven ground, observing if he proceeds freely without whip or spur, and if his paces are good. If he lifts his fore-feet pretty high; steps longer or shorter, as may be necessary; goes wide behind, and near before, and proceeds freely when you give him the rein, he is very likely to prove a good servant.

The age of a Horse is judged of by his teeth; but in this there are deceptions; as the dealers sometimes burn them with an engraving-tool, to make the marks in old teeth appear like those in young ones.—Be careful in observing a Horse's eyes. The directions of an approved writer on this subject, are, to observe them in the light, and if in the first trial the pupil dilates largely, and contracts again as the Horse is exposed to a more clear Sun, you may conclude his eyes are good; small eyes are a bad sign; the colour often is the cause of a good or bad eye: the Hazel eye is best, because the Horse that has such an eye is generally of a good colour; whereas the Wall-eye is common to the half-bred Horse, a colour not coveted, as they often have white soft hoofs, and are frequently of a watery or lax constitution, which is never to be chose for the road. A general maxim is, if a Horse empty himself often on the road, we infer he is no Horse for a long journey, unless it is intended to make a skeleton of him.—Observe, in the purchase of a Horse, that his knees are not broken; for if he is apt to fall, no merit can compensate for that vice.

The following are deemed signs of a good Saddle-Horse—the neck rising in a semicircular form; the fore-feet standing even, and boldly forward; thin shoulders, and a flat chest. A Horse that cuts or goes amiss in his motion, will do so in all others; though this may be partly remedied by the care of the Smith.

To know a sounder or hot-footed Horse, survey him in the stable, and if he frequently changes his fore-feet, to ease them, you may conclude that he is disordered. If a Horse is a good trotter down hill, it may be depended on that he is so on all other ground.

A sound tough hoof, that will endure travelling on hard roads without heating, is a valuable property in a Horse, and will, in a great degree, supply the want of good shoulders; but if the hoofs are tender, and the shoulders heavy, it is most probable that he will frequently fall.

When on a journey, look often at your Horse's back, taking care that the saddle does not gall him; but if this should happen through neglect, and the back is inflamed, apply Vinegar, warm Urine, or salt Water, as coolers: tho' when the skin is broke in holes, from what is termed Warbles, Tincture of Myrrh, Aloes, and Spirits of Wine, in equal quantities, mixed with a little Oil of Turpentine, is esteemed proper to bathe it with occasionally.—A careful traveller will sometimes walk in favour of his Horse.

In travelling, it is requisite to take great care with respect to watering your Horse. In hot weather, when he perspires a great deal, you should let him drink frequently, but not a great quantity at once: Within two miles of the place you mean to stop at for the night, it will be proper to let him drink more freely, and trot him afterwards, that the liquor may be warmed within him, while the heat will grow cooler.—If you have not had an opportunity of giving him water on the road, do not permit the others to lead him to water, or wash him, [as is very common] but after he has stood half an hour in the stable, give him a proper quantity of water made luke-warm.

The principal cause of the Creak in Horses is owing to the neglect of those who look after them, by suffering the scratches to increase to too great a degree.—The scratches in Horses bear some resemblance to killed heels in Men and Children; and are occasioned, principally by filth and carelessness.—The best method of cure is, first to wash the heels of the beast with warm water, then to anoint the affected part with the following ointment, and turn him into your pasture-grounds.

Take of Flinders Oil, of Rays and Quicksilver, each half an ounce; of white Ointment two ounces: melt the white Ointment a little, then stir in the Oil of Rays, and then the Quicksilver, keeping the whole in motion, so that the Quicksilver will not sink to the bottom.

Horses are liable to a disorder called "A clap in the back-sinew," which is occasioned thus;—"When a Horse over-reaches in his walk or trot, he is apt to strain the back-sinew; or by getting his foot into a hole in the sand.—When he does this, and has a heavy weight upon him, he often catches himself so hastily upon stumbling, that he strains the back sinew or tendon behind his fore-leg."

The ill consequence arising from the above-mentioned accident, is cured by applying the following medicine:—Rust of Armoniac, four ounces, and the whites of ten Eggs, to which add as much strong Wine Vinegar as will make the whole into a stiff pulvise; then wash and bathe the leg well with warm Water, and wipe it dry with a tender hand; after which spread the pulvise on a thin leather, and apply it all along the sinew and part affected.

If you ride a valuable Horse a journey, and he should get a shoulder-slip, or a strain in his back-sinew, do not force him on the road, but leave him in the cure of an honest Farmer, to be cured as in the directions above-mentioned.

R E C I P T S.

Receipt for killing Caterpillars and other Insects.

Take of assafoetida one ounce, and of wormwood three or four ounces, break down the ingredients, and boil them in ten or twelve scots pints of water. When sufficiently boiled strain the ingredients through a cloth, and when cold use the liquor as use tion requires, upon your trees, bushes, &c. before the buds are opened, and the tree will noway be injured. As the smell of the above is offensive, the ingredients should be boiled in the open air.

To keep Birds from Fruits.

Smear the branches of the trees with the juice of Garlick or hang a bundle of it on one of the branches, and the birds will not meddle with the fruit.

To take the natural and lively shape of an Herb, Leaf, &c.

First take the leaf you would copy, and gently rub the veins on the back side of it with a piece of Ivory, or smooth bone, so as to bruise them a little; afterwards wet the same side gently with Linseed Oil, and then press it hard upon a piece of paper, and you will have the perfect figure of the Leaf, with every vein in it justly expressed. This impression being coloured will seem truly natural, and is a most useful method of preserving the real appearance of the plant or leaf when pluck'd.

A Method to mark Linen, so as not to wash out again.

Take Vermilion, as much as will lay on half a crown piece, of the salt of Steel about the size of a small nutmeg, grind them well together, with Linseed Oil boiled; when you have marked your cloth, let the colour be thoroughly dry before you wash it, and the impression will remain as long as the cloth lasts.

To make a L.A.G.N. L.W.K.

Take half a pound of green Copper, clean and rocky; half a pound of Gum Arabic, bright and clear; two ounces of Rock Allum; one pound and a half of fresh clean Gallipot Aleppo, bruised pretty small; to all which add six quarts of Rain Water, or if that cannot be got, of River Water: let all these stand together in an earthen or stone jar, or a stone bottle, with a neck as narrow as to exclude the dust. Shake your vessel once a day, and stir it well all, once in twenty four hours, and in about a month your ink will be fit for use; and will become the better the longer you keep it.

To make a R.E.D. I.N. Ink with an Iron

Put a quarter of a pound of Ground Small wood into three pints of stale Beer; let them stand together about an hour, strain off the Muck through a flannel, bottle it up carefully, and preserve for use.
